Overview

Auckland Council is developing a 100-year adaptive management policy to respond to water-related impacts of climate change. The purpose of the policy is to reduce harms and build resilient systems and communities for Aucklanders facing a future with too much water.

We require a package of information and collateral (including but not limited to reports, tables, diagrams, images, process map and tools to help assess the appropriate intervention etc) for communication and engagement purposes. They will be used to create a baseline understanding about the types of events and intervention options. And as a communication tool to facilitate discussion and decision making.
